14-21 SEPTEMBER 2023

About the Global Week For Action on NCDs

The Global Week for Action on NCDs unites the NCD community every September, concentrating our combined efforts to help reduce the NCD burden globally and improve health equity for all. On social media we are united with #ActOnNCDs.

This year, the campaign spotlights the call to close the care gap for people living with NCDs.

The campaign calls on everyone, everywhere to take action and be an agent of change. From posting on social media, to contacting local politicians and policy makers, to organising a health-promoting event for your community, no action is too small; no voice is insignificant.

CAMPAIGN THEME

CARE

From 2020 to 2025, each year we focus on a specific theme.
In 2023, the theme is care.

We have one clear message for governments, ministers of finance and health, donors, international agencies, and the private sector: the moment for caring about people living with noncommunicable diseases is now.

We call on governments and heads of state to uphold their commitments to Universal Health Coverage (UHC), ensuring that everyone has access to the healthcare that they need, without risk of financial hardship, and regardless of where they live or who they are.

1 INVEST

Invest in the prevention and control of NCDs through adequate, predictable, and sustained resources for UHC.

2 ACCELERATE

Accelerate UHC implementation by including quality NCD prevention and care services in country UHC health benefit packages.

3 ALIGN

Align development and global health priorities to achieve UHC.

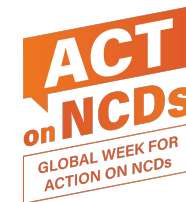

4 ENGAGE

Engage people living with NCDs to keep UHC people-centered.

The campaign theme for 2023 is THE MOMENT FOR CARING

When we look at the economics of health, we see a story of inequity. World leaders have promised to ensure everyone has access to healthcare, regardless of ability to pay, by 2030 – this is known as Universal Health Coverage (UHC).

In 2023, the Global Week for Action on NCDs will advocate for this inequity to end by putting the spotlight on the care gap for NCDs. We aim to catalyse fair and effective solutions to support every person, every family and every community affected by NCDs and make the cost for care and treatment affordable.

Heads of State and Governments will meet in September 2023 in New York to discuss UHC at the High-Level Meeting. This will be an opportunity to advance UHC policy and implementation in the lead up to 2030.

“The brutal fact is that for many people around the world, the chances of surviving an NCD depend on their ability to pay for care out of their own pocket. With the UHC High-Level Meeting happening this September 2023, we are calling on governments to change this, to make bold commitments for people living with NCDs around the world.” - Katie Dain NCD Alliance CEO

The moment for caring

OVERVIEW OF THEMES OF THE DAY

- Cross-cutting Action on NCDs - 14 September
- Caring: from prevention to palliation - 15 September
- Joining efforts for development and health priorities - 18 September
- Considerate caring: engaging people living with NCDs - 19 September
- Investments for caring – 20 September
- NCD care in Universal Health Coverage - 21 September

Cross-cutting Action on NCDs

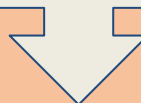

NCDs remain one of the most pressing developmental public health issues today. It is time to act collectively and address care gaps through the whole-of-government and whole-of-society approaches.

Only a handful of countries are on track to reduce by one third the premature mortality from noncommunicable diseases by 2030 and meet SDG target 3.4.

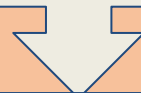

To turn the tide on NCDs and achieve SDG 3.4 and 3.8, the highest level of leadership is essential. We also need policy coherence and coordination through a whole-of-government approach and engaging with non-state actors in an appropriate, coordinated, comprehensive and integrated response.

Caring: from prevention to palliation

People around the world need affordable high-quality essential healthcare across the whole spectrum of services – from prevention and treatment to palliative care – to protect themselves from NCDs throughout their lifetime.

Half of adults living with diabetes are undiagnosed and are unable to access the insulin they need; hypertension is only under medical control for one in five people; chronic kidney disease tends to go untreated with up to 90% of cases undiagnosed until lifesaving dialysis or a transplant is needed, and more than 90% of cancer patients in low-income countries lack access to radiotherapy.

Health systems should adopt an integrated, life course approach, including services across the continuum of care. Countries should fund those services in national UHC health benefits packages by drawing on WHO 'best buys' and other international recommended interventions.

Joining efforts for development and health priorities

There is a crucial need to align development and global health priorities to achieve UHC, act on NCDs, and uphold the right to health for all.

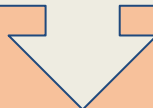

Many people live with multiple NCDs or live with both an NCD and a chronic communicable disease, such as HIV/AIDS or tuberculosis.

It is crucial to keep UHC people-centred and overcome the challenge of treating individual diseases in silos. A whole-of-government and whole-of society approach, beyond health sectors, is necessary to deliver a comprehensive response to NCDs and achieve UHC and health security.

Considerate caring: engaging people living with NCDs

Governments alone cannot achieve UHC. Engagement of all stakeholders, particularly communities and civil society, makes health systems more transparent and based on real people's needs.

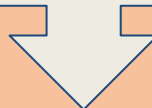

Only a few countries have implemented formal accountability mechanisms for UHC. More can be done to strengthen the coordination of multi-stakeholder ecosystems and involvement of people living with NCDs.

The Global Charter on Meaningful Involvement of People Living with NCDs & WHO Framework provide key guidance to enable the meaningful involvement of people living with NCDs in decision-making at all levels.

Investments for caring

NCD response needs adequate funding in countries. By investing in Universal Health Coverage (UHC) we can contribute to saving lives, reducing poverty, and promoting equity.

Equity in access to essential health services means that the entire population is covered, not only those who are able to afford services. Without UHC those who are unable to pay for healthcare might end up paying with their lives.

To reach UHC, countries should spend at least 5% of their gross domestic product (GDP) on health. Also, WHO recommends to increase spending on primary healthcare by one extra percent of GDP as part of national UHC plans.

NCD care in Universal Health Coverage

Building on national basic healthcare packages, UHC can ensure that everyone has equal access to a broad range of high-quality health services throughout the life and across services from prevention to palliative care.

Only a few countries have adopted clear action plans towards UHC, and most implementation efforts have revealed discriminatory practices and a lack of quality in the provision of healthcare services.

UHC requires more efforts at the national level of tried-and-tested public health policies, including ones on health promotion and NCD prevention. National UHC roadmaps should integrate efforts to build health-enabling environments and speed up the roll-out of UHC by 2030.
